Good news for hunters!

According to the 2012 MSU hunting forecast the deer population in much of the Northern Lower Peninsula is expected to be higher than last year. With three mild winters in a row, deer numbers have rebounded since the harsh winters of 2007 and 2008. Due to the increase in the population, some areas previously closed to antlerless hunting will be open this year including 072 (Roscommon), where antlerless licenses were made available for both public and private land.

Despite poor conditions in much of the state, some NLP areas have reported good production of acorns and apples. Deer should be expected to frequent these areas, so scouting to find these locations will be important.
